yard that they couldn't see to bat well and it may be that the light hitting of the last week was still with them. In either event they profited more by Tennessee's errors than they did from their own swatting. There hasn't been much show of team siprit or vim in the Giants the last few days, but they didn't have to have much of either to beat the collegians. They have been bumped several times by professional nines of but can take care of amateurs all right The local pitcher this afternoon did very well, holding the Giants to seven hits, but his support was a fright. The throwing of the Tennesseeans was very voke them into hurling spasms on elightest provocation. The way fore he lunged and cracked out a single. A throw by Smith to Fletcher, which caught a runner napping at the middle stand, was the best pegging Smitty has done in some time.

McGraw umpired the game to the satisfaction of all concerned. Bristol is the next stopping place for the Glants.
